THE GAZETTE.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 10, 1889.

FAIRLY CAUGHT.

My employment is that of a carver on stone. Many years ago, soon after I had learned my business, the firm in whose employ I was undertook the erection of a gentleman's mansion, and I was sent to execute the ornamental work. The village near to which the mansion was built was on the shore of an estuary of the bay of Morecambe, not far from a market town whose name I need not give. As my work would keep me from home several weeks a good lodging was a most desirable thing, but although I tried to get accommodation in a private house, I failed, and was forced to lodge in the village inn, the Lord Admiral.

Amongst those who were in the habit of frequenting the aforesaid hostelry was a fellow of singular habits and odd temper. His home was about a mile from the village, on the side of a lane leading to a couple of farms. His house, like himself, was a queer one. Originally it had been built for the storage of corn, the produce of fields at a distance from the farmstead. Somehow it had ceased to be needed for that purpose; so its owner turned it into a dwelling house, and as such it was now occupied by the aforesaid strange man. It was divided into three apartments on the ground floor, one of which, a very large one, was set apart and used as a kind of museum, its occupant being a stuffer of birds and small quadrupeds. When he had no work of this sort for other persons, he worked for stock, and this large room was his warehouse.

He was a man of ill temper and loose habits, and for some time had borne a dubious character. When people were asked why he was suspected, they would not give a satisfactory reply. "He lives there," they would say, "without doing work equal to his expenditure, which looks bad." As I got to know him, I found that he had an unsavory temper; was morose, sour, and at times passionate. He was also fond of display, given to betting, and, like all such, led a loose, uneven life, a drier judge, had done his work well. He had also a good assortment of butterflies and moths; and in a corner, close to the ceiling, had what he called a butterfly breeding-box, which he said belonged to his son, a young man of my own age, also given to bird-stuffing amusements.

But was most taken up with two animals which differed from the rest. One was a beautiful dog, and the other a housenature—a lamb with the rudiments of a fifth leg, and some other abnormal characteristics which I have forgotten. The old man said he had stuffed both for their original owners, who had somehow failed to take them away. They were placed at one end of the room, one in each other, away from the window, and close to the wall, where, except in strong daylight they could not be easily seen. The connection of these particulars with my story will be seen in the sequel.

I had been in the village about six weeks when the neighborhood was aroused and alarmed one morning by the report of the robbery of a jeweler's shop in the market town nearby. The robbery had been effected during the preceding night. Much valuable property had been taken. This robbery had been effected in such a way as led to the belief that a gang of practiced thieves had done it. The prevailing question was, "Do the robbers live among us, or have they come from a distance?" This query was still going from mouth to mouth when we were startled, suddenly indeed, by the report of a second robbery of the same premises, and on the night following by the breaking into and purloining of a provision warehouse in our own village. Were I writing fiction, I would not have made the robbers pay so soon a second visit to the jeweler's, as such an act would have been deemed preposterous; but I am relating what really occurred, and so am forced to say what I have said.

The jeweler had been so taken up by his first loss that he had not placed additional guard over what was left; besides, he was sure, he said that thieves would not think of revisiting him for a long time. As for the provision dealer, he said in my hearing that he had lost his place being entered as he believed robbers would not care to touch property so bulky and of such inferior value as his. But he had reckoned without his host; for he had lost a fine ham, a large lot of tea, a deal of spices, a few boxes of cigars, and indeed a portion of most of what he dealt in. The excitement and alarm occasioned by these robberies were great and wide-spread.

Two batches of detectives, one from Lancaster and the other from Kendal, came to our village to see what they could find out. They were not short of questions; I asked them what sort of questions they answered. It was easy to see that one of their aims was to make it appear that they had been looking for robbers from a distance, in order to put the blame off their guard; for their own opinion was the opposite of this.

No event, however serious, can keep hold of people's minds beyond a certain time; and these robberies were beginning to give place to some other subject, when the next act in the drama began to be played. It was on a Friday afternoon, about a month after the robberies. The day was wet and a driving rain was on the door carving of stones which had been placed in position in the road. I was unable to go on with it, so had to return to my quarters. I had got my dinner, and had just called for a pint of ale with my pipe, when an elderly ill-dressed man came in, and sitting down on a bench beside me, said in a low, hoarse, creaking voice, "I'll sup w' the lad, it doesn't care; 'n' he'll be lifted my mug to his lips, and drank freely. I had not got over my surprise when he, wiping his mouth with his hand, gave me a history of the past day or two. The account was this: he had been a gentleman's gardener, near Lancaster, over twenty years; had a capital place, but had not been enough to keep it, for he had gone on the loose for a fortnight, which was more than his master would put up with; so he was discharged. "This w' day afore yesterday," he said, "an' I've drank for vary vexation ever sin', 'trampin' as I drink; 'n' so here I am, w' no drink, no food, no money, 'n' no pocket. Does that look like a gentleman's? Well, he consoled, 'an' can raise a penny or tuppence among 'his company'."

I gave him a trifle; others did the same; so having thus "raised the wind," he called for bread, cheese and ale, and made a good meal.

During the time the gardener had been talking to me, the landlord had been with me in hearing. So according to the old man while he was with me, he said, "You are a gardener, I understand?" "I am," was the reply.

"Well," said the landlord, "I've a garden which needs tending. I have not time to attend to it myself; and as it is time the seed was in, I'll employ you if you are willing. I'll find you plenty to eat and drink, and a bed as well as a dinner; and if you please me, I'll not see you leave me without a few shillings in your pocket. What say you?"

"I agree," replied the gardener, rising to his feet and grasping the landlord's hand. "I'll not begin to-morrow, however; but I'll look round, and get ridly for Monday morn'."

This proposal was satisfactory, wherefore the gardener was made happy. Shortly afterward we had an addition to our company by the incoming of the old bird-stuffer, whom I shall henceforth call the naturalist (as this designation was the one which pleased him), his son the butterfly-breeder, and two other men whom I had not yet seen. These—the strangers—first looked hard at the company; but the naturalist, giving them a significant nod, which seemed to say, "All right," they settled down and called for a glass of rum apiece.

By this time the gardener had finished his dinner, was putting his arms on the table and his head on his arms, he fell, or seemed to fall, asleep. The rain which continued to come down, compelled me still to abide under cover; so placing my chair in a corner, and putting my head against the wall, I tried to get a nap also. The naturalist and his companions were now the only persons in the room besides the gardener and me.

I can not tell half nor a quarter of what was said by first one and then another of the four persons; nor did I understand some of the phrases which they used. "Bruce," "Wonder," "flax," and "stiffing" were words often employed by them. I recollected that "Bruce" was the name of the dog, and "Wonder" that of the lamb, in the museum before spoken of; and the other terms, I judged, referred to the materials with which they were stuffed; but I could not see why they should speak in so low a tone as they did when they spoke of them. Once or twice they referred to a bird by some slang phrase. But after events made this clear enough.

By and by the waiter took up, when the men, draining their glasses, got up and went away. The moment they were gone the gardener roused up, took a memorandum book out of his pocket, and began to write therein. He then asked me if I knew who the men were, and what was their occupation, and if I understood any of the words they had uttered in the lower tone of voice. I gave him what information I could. "But," I said, "both they and I are asleep."

"It is well to go into dream land at times," he said; and then added: "Did you say that the old man keeps a museum? Have you seen it? Do you think I could get a look at it?"

The questions were put one after the other in quick succession, as though he were eager and anxious about something. "But," I said, "I was surprised to see the good English in which he now spoke, and at the refinement which marked his manners. Still I could make nothing of it."

I passed over the next few days, as they brought forth no remarkable incident. The gardener had stuck to his contract with the landlord, but I had not seen him to go on with my work. The four men did not again visit us; but as I went on with my carving, I saw first one and then another of them pass my place. And once saw them all in earnest converse in a retired lane.

After supper one night I took the gardener to the bar-like habitation of the old naturalist. As we went along, he asked me to take particular notice of the dog and the lamb. "For," said he, "I was struck with the questions one of the men put as to whether 'Bruce' and 'Wonder' could take in any more 'cuttins' or 'flax.' And it is just possible," he continued, "that he has a way of taking out and putting in the stuffing about the skin has become set and hard a thing worth knowing, I should think."

When we got to the house the old man came to the door, closing it after him. Being asked if he would allow the gardener to see over his collection of personal animals, he at first seemed perplexed, and saying, "I'll ask my son," he went in, leaving us outside. No more was said, and I said, "It is not convenient to enter the room to-night, as it is being cleaned and the contents re-arranged; but if your friend will come to-morrow night, and come alone, he shall see over it."

We agreed, and came away. I was at a loss to account for the condition imposed, but my companion was set up with the arrangement.

Next night came, and the gardener set off on his errand. I was all impatience for his return. But when he came back he seemed unwilling to relate the result of his adventure, simply saying, "I'm in no humor to talk to-night; I'll relate what I've seen and said to-morrow."

My friend had got on well with his gardener, his potatoes and onions, his turnips and carrots, had been got in; and it was clear that if the next two days should prove fine, he would finish the job on the Saturday night.

On Friday night he came to me in the kitchen, in a state of which I was reading, and a bed me and a short talk with him. I got up and went. The night was fine, but we walked in the direction of the museum. He asked me if I could keep a secret for a day or two. Replying in the affirmative, he said he had a strong suspicion that the old naturalist or his son was no better than he said, and that he was sure he or they knew more about the robberies than other folk; and that he believed he had a few shillings which he could call his own, he could come at the truth, and concluded by asking me to lend him a sovereign for a few days. I agreed, for I had begun to feel an uncomfortable curiosity growing within me.

We had not walked far before we met the naturalist's son, who was in a great hurry; for my companion told him that I had promised him a loan, and that therefore we would be at his father's house next day and make a purchase. We parted and came home.

At the middle of Saturday afternoon he set off, and in less than an hour he came back, bearing a tolerably sized parcel. Giving me a signal as he passed me, I joined him in the back yard. He said: "I'm on the track of the thieves, I believe. Last night, but one, on reaching the house, and while looking over the museum, the old man said that his son was rather short of money, but having exchanged a frame of mine and a few birds for a lot of provisions, if I would buy some of the latter I might sell them at a profit, or they would keep me in cash for a while, and the sale would relieve his son. I agreed to buy it I could raise the money. Now, I am not without cash, but it would not have done to say so; hence I agreed to ask you for a loan. Well, I've got a lot of things to dry dirt cheap, which I really believe belong to one of the late robbers; go hence to-morrow on the sly, but on Monday you may look for me return." Giving me a playful dig in the side, he left me. His absence during the night and the day after surprised the landlord, but I said nothing.

I was all impatience until Monday came. It came at last. I was busy at my carving, when I heard a well-known voice call me from below. On looking down from my stage, whom should I see in the road below, smiling all the face over, but my old friend the gardener in a policeman's uniform! The truth flashed through me in a moment. I went down. Grasping my hand, he said, "The secret's out, you see! Come along with me and see the upshot." I was about to write him down as a thief, but he had not looked for. Up the road were a couple of policemen. My old companion was the chief, being a sergeant of police. He led the way to the museum and was first to enter.

"Good morning, old friend," he said, on encountering the naturalist. "I've come to take away a few more parcels of your cheap provisions."

I saw that the old gardener [was detected in the speaker, and that the game was seen to be up. The old man's son rushed to the door and scrambled off, only, however, to fall into the clutches of one of the officers who was on the watch. The old man was utterly helpless, and utterly beside himself. Sinking into his chair, he cried out, "I'm not the thief; the thieves are there," pointing, I could see, to his son and his confederates, though they were not present.

We went into the museum. The first thing the old gardener—as I shall still call him—did was to take hold of "Bruce," while he desired one of his comrades to lay hold of "Wonder." On moving them a noise of loose metal was heard. A moment's examination sufficed to reveal the secret. In the off side of each animal, in the soft part, an orifice had been made by cutting the skin in such a way as to enable the operator to replace it with a little care. A part of the stuffing had been removed, leaving a vacancy just like a throat's nest. This was filled with jewelry—watches, guards, earrings and finger-rings. A further examination of the museum revealed other and as singular hiding places—for example, a game cock was put out of sight; on taking hold of it a noise of clinking metal was heard; on lifting up the feathers over the head, a small hole was seen, out of which rolled when the bird was shaken, a number of trinkets.

Nearly all the proceeds of the two robberies of the jeweler were recovered a few guards and one watch only being absent. And some of the property of the provision dealer was also found stowed in the provision box, though most of it had been used or sold. I scarcely need say that the parcel sold to the gardener was a part of it, and had been the decision. My friend, the sergeant informed me that he had been induced to assume the character which he had so well enacted entirely on speculation. While making a survey of the neighborhood a few days before he began to play his part, he had observed the backward state of the landlord's garden; and believing that he would readily catch a chance of getting it finished off in a cheap way, and being a good hand at gardening, he had hit upon the scheme which had answered so well. He had believed that the robbers were not far from the locality of the public house, and might come there now and again, and so, could he lodge there without being known or suspected, he might come at all he desired. And as he hoped, so did it come to pass.

The naturalist, who it came out, had been a receiver of stolen property, and his son, whose first burglaries these were, got five years' penal servitude; one of the other men, who came from a distant town, and were old hands, were likewise convicted. I said "Yes" to each, but for some forgotten reason got off. My friend came in for the good reward offered in the case; and for the part which I had taken in the affair the jeweler gave me a gold pencil holder, which I treasure as a memento.

IMPORTANT LETTER

From a Distinguished Physician.

No single disease has entailed more suffering or ruined the health of the human race than Catarrh. The sense of smell, of taste, of sight, of hearing, the human voice, the mind, and more or less of the system are all affected by this disease. The poison it distributes throughout the system, every vital force of the body is weakened, and the system is brought to a state of prostration. It is a disease of the blood, and is caused by quack and charlatans, those suffering from it have been cured by the use of this medicine. ### SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE

MAY safely claim to be one of the few popular remedies receiving the approval of medical gentlemen, who, in private, and only freely recommend it but use it in their families in preference to any of the quack remedies usually recommended by physicians.

"I am aware," said a distinguished city physician, "that my obligations to the Mass. Medical Society require that I cannot publicly recommend or prescribe the Radical Cure; but I have used it so much relief from the use of it myself, after a thorough trial of the usual remedies, I have so much valued its use, and presume I have sent to your store no less than one hundred of my patients for it."

COLLINS' VOLTAIC PLASTER

An Electro-Galvanic Battery combined with a highly medicated strengthening plaster, for the relief of rheumatism, neuralgia, and all other forms of pain and aches in the world of medicine.

ELECTRICITY

As a grand curative and restorative agent it is not the least of the modern era. It is the only method of healing art. Unless the vital spark has fled the body, restoration by means of electricity is possible. It is the only method of curing all diseases, and has renewed thousands, apparently dead, and has cured the most obstinate cases of paralysis, and all other forms of disease. It is the only method of curing all diseases, and has renewed thousands, apparently dead, and has cured the most obstinate cases of paralysis, and all other forms of disease.

BALSAM AND PINE.

The healing properties of our own fragrant balsam and pine and the gums of the East are too well known to require description. But in accordance with the knowledge of the properties of these two substances, we have prepared a balsam of great value in the treatment of all diseases of the lungs, and all other forms of disease. It is the only method of curing all diseases, and has renewed thousands, apparently dead, and has cured the most obstinate cases of paralysis, and all other forms of disease.

TWO IN ONE.

Thus combined we have two grand medical agents in one, each of which performs its function and entirely produces more cures than any other remedy. It is the only method of curing all diseases, and has renewed thousands, apparently dead, and has cured the most obstinate cases of paralysis, and all other forms of disease.

CITY AND COUNTY.

BRIEFLETS.

—Cooling off.
—The wrestlers to-night.
—The Round Table will have a Tempestuous session to-night.

—A new and corrected form of foreclosure blanks just printed at Gazette counting room.

—Let's see. Wasn't there a Citizens Committee appointed a while ago? A good many are anxiously waiting for the report.
—It has become necessary to change the date of Dr. Anderson's lecture to the 17th inst., on which evening he will deliver it at Cannon's hall.

—The "Hobby Bazar" will be given in Lappin's Music Hall, Saturday evening, January 17, instead of Thursday 15, as heretofore announced.

—Hiram Jackson, whom all know here, is now proprietor of the Harwood house at Littleton, Colorado, ten miles south of Denver, and is making it a success.

—Lost—on the evening of the Temple of Honor entertainment, December 29th, a pair of cardinal colored mittens with fancy knit backs. An owner is waiting for the same at the Gazette counting room.

—Sprague's Minstrels to be at the Opera house next Tuesday evening, and promise a first class show. Those who want to have real fun and hear good music are checking off their seats, and making ready to go.

—Mrs. Bridge's lecture next Tuesday evening on "Human Freedom" is of a nature to interest as well as to instruct all, and that subject in the hands of so eloquent an advocate cannot fail to touch the public heart. Lappin's hall should be packed.

—E. B. Heimstreet is scattering broadcast an advertising paper bearing his name as publisher, and containing some interesting reading matter together with information as to his business. He is bound to keep the public posted as to what he is doing.

—Next Wednesday evening the famous Dickie Lingard and her comedy company are to be at the Opera House in "Our Boys." It will be one of the choice entertainments of the season, and will surely draw. Miss Lingard has had a wonderful ovation in Chicago, and has in all appeared over four hundred times in this play. It will be a treat.

—Michael Connors, an old man, was allowed to go free yesterday morning on promising to leave the city. He was kindly furnished with suitable clothing, but his ingratitude was such that he shoved up his coat for drinks and was on a loud hurrah when the Marshal again collared him and led him to jail. He was this morning sentenced to thirty days, for vagrancy.

—There promises to be a large attendance at Mrs. Noon's entertainment next Monday evening. Recitations, music, character sketches, in fact a potpourri of good things has been prepared, which will interest all, as the programme will be carried out by local talent. A merry dance is to follow, and at the merely nominal prices charged, Mrs. Noon should be given a crowded house. It will really prove a happy way of spending Monday evening.

—James Murray, a wild youth, was brought into the Police Court to-day charged with having assaulted a telegraph student named James Chavaler, the latter having occurred several days ago. Murray used a club for his weapon, and caused a bloody wound to the student's left ear. The assault seems to be wholly uncalculated for, and the accused on pleading guilty was sentenced to twenty days at hard labor in jail.

—George West, drunk, five days in jail.
—The Craig case is occupying considerable time and drawing quite a crowd to Justice Brooks' court. A large number of Evansville witnesses are in attendance. The State is attempting to prove that Craig is the man who mutilated the tombstones in the cemetery there, and brings forward two witnesses to testify as to admissions made by the prisoner, while a large number of other witnesses were called on other points. The case does not seem to be anywhere near an end yet.

—Mons Joseph, who is to be one in the wrestling match at the Opera house to-night, is already in the city, and Prof. Marc will surely arrive on the afternoon train from Milwaukee. There is evidently a feeling existing between these two which will make the match an interesting one, as Joseph has some old grievances which he very much desires to satisfy, and Marc has won honors which he does not care to sacrifice. The match will bring out a struggle of muscle which will prove exciting, and at the same time void of brutality and blood-shedding.

—Travelers, stop at the Astor House, NEW YORK.

THE WEATHER.

REPORTED BY PATERSON & EVANSON, DIAGNOSTIC.
The thermometer at 6 o'clock last evening stood at 31 degrees above; at 1 o'clock a.m., to-day at 22 degrees above; at 7 o'clock a.m., at 22 degrees above; at 1 o'clock p.m., at 36 degrees above. Clear.

The indications to-day are, westerly winds, back to southerly, cool, followed by stationary or higher temperature, rising followed by stationary barometer, clear or partly cloudy weather.

People run a great risk both of person and property, by using ordinary kerosene lamps, and now that a safe lamp can be had, people should use no other. The Harris & Smith Lamp is for sale everywhere.

A JOYOUS EVENING.

Last evening there was a pleasant society gathering at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Pritchard. Among those present were Miss Clara Waite, of Milwaukee, the Misses Bennett, Miss May Patterson, Miss Lizzie Battle, Mr. McGowan, Will Bintliff, J. F. Pember, C. A. Carter, J. F. Pritchard, C. N. Vankirk, and R. R. Lee. The evening was made enjoyable by instrumental music by Miss Lizzie Battle and Miss Clara Waite, and by songs by the Pember House Glee Club and Mr. McGowan. A beautiful supper was served at about 11 o'clock, by the Misses Pritchard, who entertained the company in a hospitable and happy manner. The affair was informal but highly enjoyable to all who participated.

terted the company in a hospitable and happy manner. The affair was informal but highly enjoyable to all who participated.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The schools of the city will on Monday next enter upon a new term of fourteen weeks. The teachers met to-day at the Central Building and received their general instructions and arranged for the opening. The teachers remain in the same positions as last term with a few exceptions. Miss Abbie Mead is transferred from the First Intermediate of the Central District to the Second Intermediate of the Fifth District, and Mrs. H. W. Tilton, will supply the vacancy thus caused.

Miss Emma Mout will serve in the Second Intermediate of the Third District in place of Miss Hattie Brace, resigned.

Miss Carrie Hanson will serve as substitute for Miss Ida Bates until the latter's health will permit of her return to the work.

Mrs. Beers will take charge of the Second District school in the absence of Mrs. G. C. Cunningham, who is excused for the term.

With these changes the roll of teachers will remain as before.

A HAPPY SOCIAL.

Last evening there was a social gathering of friends at the residence of W. L. Gockins. The first portion of the evening was given to a musical and literary entertainment. Miss Lucy A. Barrett, a young lady from Rockford, was present, and gave several recitations, which were most excellent, and showed that she is an artist of wonderful ability for one of her years. The company were very enthusiastic over her recitations. Mr. Twitchell favored the company with a solo "The Wagon," and in response to an encore gave "Twas evening at the window." Prof. Boston gave a comic song "Watkin's Evening Party" which caused much merriment. George Gookins sang a solo and Miss Carrie Jacobs gave an instrumental piece.

These exercises were all highly entertaining. The latter part of the evening was given to dancing. Bountiful refreshments were served, and all the guests were most happily and hospitably entertained.

A SLIM SHOW.

Haverly has the reputation of being a very energetic and shrewd business manager, but he made a bad move last night in sending to this city a part of his minstrel troupe, and trying to serve up a show on half shell. His minstrels have won much praise, and are doubtless able to do some good work, but when divided they fail. It is understood that a portion of the troupe are delegated to take in the northern portion of the State, and the other portion to visit the southern cities, and towns, and then unite for Milwaukee. Janesville has thus been taken in, and if the other portion of the troupe is as poor as the one which showed up here last night, they will need to more than double up, or else get into some part of the country where the people have never seen a minstrel show before.

The advertised promises were broken with apparently the same ease that a giant would break a straw. The only redeemable feature was the bass solo of Little's, Allen's dancing, and some violin playing. Haverly has established a good reputation here, and almost anything bearing his name would draw a crowd, but it will prove so no longer. The public will not pin its faith to a name any longer, and will not place too great confidence in advertised promises. The show last evening will hurt Haverly's management here more than the extra dollars which he sought to make, will help him.

Mr. Albert Rocher, 349 Avenue B, New York, was cured of Rheumatism by a single application of St. Jacobs Oil, and recommends this wonderful remedy to all sufferers from this painful disease.

SAVED FROM THE PAST.

Mr. James Van Sicken showed us yesterday some of the rare curiosities which he has in his possession, and which form only a fragment of a cabinet of antiquities gathered by the late William B. Lewis, his father-in-law. Among them was some colonial paper money, one bill being for five pounds, issued by the colony of New York in 1771. The strange warning is given in one corner of the quaint bill "This death to counterfeit." Another is a $6 bill of continental currency dated 1775 and issued by the United Colonies.

Another bit of money which is worth keeping is a Mexican silver dollar, which was one of the famous Gibbs' dollars. Some forty years or more ago Gibbs and other pirates got possession of a Spanish brig, and after murdering the captain and mate, took command, and captured a large amount of these silver dollars. They run the brig ashore on Long Island, and buried these silver dollars in the sand. Soon after the tide washed some of the silver out of its hiding place, and much was found along the shore. One man picked up a bushel of these silver dollars, and others found or dug out smaller amounts. Great excitement was caused by the affair at the time. This piece of money was one of those which was thus found.

A still older piece of silver is in Mr. Van Sicken's possession, it being a foreign coin bearing the date of 1746. Mr. Lewis had during his lifetime gathered many of these rare things which grow of more and more value as time passes by.

A VETERAN PHYSICIAN.

Dr. V. Clarence Price is again in the city, and is at his quarters at the Myers house. There are scores who hail his visits to Janesville with delight. To them he has been a benefactor. When disease preyed upon the system, when courage was lost and hope all gone, when others had failed to give relief, Dr. Price became their physician, and not only renewed their courage and restored their hope, but he cured their disease. There are probably hundreds in this county who can bear testimony to these statements. He has visited Janesville for eighteen consecutive years, and his success has increased with his regular visits. For many years he has given special attention and careful study to chronic diseases of the heart, the lungs, the throat, the liver, and the stomach, and his mastery over these has been something wonderful. He does not pretend to cure all ailments, neither does he claim that he can give substantial relief in every case of chronic difficulty, regardless of its nature or condition. There is reason in his pretensions and honesty in his practice. He never trifles with his patients, and never attempts to build up groundless hope in a patient for the purpose of getting gain. He is skillful and honorable, and these have contributed to his great success both here and at other cities.

Sensible Canadian.

Mr. Gadbois, of Brockville, Canada, after being cured of a prostrating malarial disease contracted in Texas, by means of Warner's Safe Pills and Safe Bitters, wrote to us: "I shall never travel in that climate without your Safe Pills and Safe Bitters as a part of my outfit."
